

1981 INTERCHANGEABLE LENS LIST

Sorting out 937 lenses is a fairly complicated task, but we've listed them in a way to make it as easy as possible for you. First, check the camera code box (page 86) for the two-letter designation for your camera. Each lens carrying that "zip" code will fit your camera. The lenses are listed by focal length (short to long) and aperture (small to large), along with filter size and minimum focusing distance within five major categories according to format and the various mount systems available.

The first four groups cover 35mm camera lenses, leading off with Non-interchangeable mount automatic diaphragm (for SLRs) and Rangefinder camera lenses (page 86). Next come the Non-interchangeable mount preset and manual diaphragm lenses (page 94) which aren't as convenient as the automatic changeable-mount automatic diaphragm lenses (page 94) involve a system that provides a series of adapters you thread onto the lens to fit it to a particular camera. Thus, you can use the same lens on all the cameras within that system and manual diaphragm lenses (page 95) work the same as those in the preceding group except for diaphragm action. The last category covers 2 1/4 x 2 1/4 cameras (page 96), including both 2 1/4 x 2 1/4 (6 x 6cm) and 2 1/4 x 1 1/2 (6 x 4.5cm) formats.

A note of caution: Not all PC cameras. Check with the manufacturer or your dealer before you buy. This year's list reflects the growing and obvious trends prevalent throughout the photographic industry of late. The bulk of the 1,000 or so listed fall into the automatic category. Within that group we are getting more and more zooms, while the number of single focal length optics is reaching a plateau. Most of this action in zooms, over the past year, has been at the short end — wide-angle to wide-angle or wide-angle to normal or moderate telephoto — of the focal length spectrum.

All lenses listed include the names of suppliers or the manufacturers (if made in the United States). They have furnished us with their suggested list prices. Due to dealers' discounting practices and other factors, these prices may have little bearing on actual selling prices, but they do provide a useful comparison.—DAVID L. MILLER
